Agellis receives order for unique measurement system from European customer

AGELLIS Group AB (publ) has received an order from a European customer, for an EMLI-T, an instrument that measures true steel level in tundishes. EMLI-T is based on the new EMLI-3 product platform recently developed by Agellis. The order value is 0.7 MSEK.

The new Agellis EMLI-T is an upgraded and powerful version of an already successful sensor system for level measurement in tundishes. The launch of new EMLI-T and the order demonstrates that Agellis is well positioned as an instrumentation supplier for the global metal's industry.

Metal producers have confidence in Agellis' ability to develop robust measurement systems based on unique sensor technology. Agellis' products are proving to be very useful to customers, improving process control, enabling higher yield and quality in the process.

"The launch of a modern powerful version of our successful EMLI-T sensor system has been eagerly awaited. Because we have been developing the product in close cooperation with the steel industry we can now present a first order for this unique system in connection with the launch. All the products we design develop and market are in answer to demands from our customers in the metal's industry" says Mårten Öbrink, CEO of Agellis.

The instrument will be delivered during the first quarter and installed during the second quarter of 2008.
